Host Nick Kroger and Linda Fossen, President of I am Whole, Inc. discuss sexual abuse on children. The Orange County Sheriff's office reports that there is a 190 page manual on how to molest children is being circulated right now around Central Florida. One in every three women and one in three men will be sexually abused by the time they reach the age of 18. In the nation, Florida is ranked number two with sexual abuse cases. We have done a good job teaching our children about stranger danger, but most cases involve family members or friends. Warning signs include changes in a child's behavior. They will become introverted or act inappropriately with sexual knowledge that they ordinarily wouldn't know. Or, a child will act uncomfortable around a certain family member. In teen years, you will see a lot of cases of cutting, eating disorders or substance abuse. We need to really pay attention.

Host Nick Kroger and Detective Eric Giebelbecker from the Orlando Police Department discuss sexual abuse on children. There are different types of child sexual abuse. It could be an adult taking advantage of a child in a sexual way, exposure, a sex act, molestation, or children with children. The police department receives calls on child sexual abuse in different ways. Reporting suspicions can be done in different ways. The calls can be made anonymously through Crimeline, a teacher or neighbor could see something, or the Department of Child Services could notify the police department. Once the call is received, the child is interviewed first to determine validity. The police department has a partnership with Victim's Service Center who has professionals to do the interviews. Sometimes cases are hard to prove because it's the adult's word against the child's word. And, sometimes it will be years later when it comes to light. Although child molestation, touching or handling has a statute of limitation, sexual battery does not.

Host Nick Kroger and Guy Inannello, Founder of Total Freedom, discuss crime prevention with repeat offenders. Between 90-95% of crime is drug addiction related. To pay for their addiction, drug addicts turn to crime. In families with children, this becomes an example and the children follow in their parents' footsteps. It's an inherited crime situation. This increases the crime statistics in our community. Sometimes going to prison isn't enough. When criminals serve their time and get out, there's no support. They're families are hurt and no longer trust them. So there needs to be a place where prisoners can go to rebuild trust. A tool that needs to be provided in order for released criminals to get back into society is accountability, having someone they can trust. Other ex-cons can be helpful because it's hard to talk to someone who hasn't been there. Another tool is reliability. If a person is staying out of prison, there is reliability. With accountability and reliability, the trust can build.

Host Nick Kroger and Melissa DeMarco, Mayor of Mount Dora, discuss how small cities are affected by the economy. Small cities in Central Florida such as Mount Dora have seasonal residents. Not only are they impacted by the economy with a decline in visitors, but also a lot of their residents leave during the summer. Because Mount Dora is a small town, it is filled with small businesses and the owners all know each other. When one business struggles, the others struggle as well. Some of the ways that Mount Dora has overcome the downturn in the economy is by having festivals and activities that draw the residents from the surrounding communities. The people coming to the festivals have a good time and see other activities in Mount Dora that they would like to take advantage of so they come back. Not only do they come back, but they tell their friends. The small businesses have also adapted, for example, the restaurants that have a low turnout for dinner, change their menus.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Andrew Meadows, Director of Communications for the FL Citrus Mutual, regarding how much the shrinking citrus market affects the Central Florida economy. The citrus industry is a 9 billion dollar market in Central Florida including 76,000 jobs in 32 counties. It is a huge part of Florida's economy, second only to tourism, but it is in danger of being eradicated. The citrus market has shrunk by 550,000 acres stated wide, but Central Florida still has a significant influence. The citrus growers tend to pass on their businesses to families, with several generations at a time remaining in the business. Growers face challenges every year with freezes, hurricanes, urban development and diseases, but always manage to endure. Two things that help the growers to continue in the business are research and diversifying with new hybrids. One of the biggest challenges right now is a new disease, HLB, which can kill trees within 2 years and is found in all citrus growing states. But, research is going on right now and there has been several breakthroughs on fighting the disease.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Sandi Vidal, Executive Director of Christian Help, about the issue of getting help to those affected by the economy. Christian Help has seen over 12,000 people this year needing help because of the economy. Seniors are struggling the most. They have been in jobs for years and now they are being laid off or forced into early retirement. They don't know how to look for a job and businesses are hiring younger employees. The largest group needing help is the middle class who have lost their jobs. They are caught off guard and have never had to ask for help before, so it's difficult for them to receive help. What is needed is help with food, housing, prescriptions and utilities, but also one-on-one counseling, attending job fairs, and creating a job plan. People need to make a plan as soon as they lose their job. Living in denial can cause problems. There are 17 different agencies in Central Florida which are collaborating to offer support to those in need. By calling 211, residents can get direction to the resources needed.

Host Nick Kroger and Sylvia McLain, Executive Director for the Seminole County Bar Association Legal Aid Society, talk about the issue of getting legal representation when you are struggling financially. In our current economy, we don't think of the necessities that aren't affordable to us. Legal representation can relieve the legal problems that hinder the ability to be self-sufficient or provide a safe environment for families. In the current economy, people sometimes do without legal services, but you should have a lawyer every time you need to deal with a legal issue. If you try to handle it yourself, you make mistakes. The Seminole County Bar Association Legal Aid Society has approximately 100 volunteer attorneys, and law students who can help with civil cases. Examples of civil cases are dissolution of marriage, child custody, child support, wrongful evictions, wrongful foreclosures, guardianship for minors, and bankruptcies. Getting things resolved allows families to focus on getting their lives back on track. It allows people to become good citizens and to care for their families.

Host Nick Kroger and Scott George, Co-Founder of the Community Food & Outreach Center, talk about the issue of getting out of the welfare system. Because of its demographics, Orlando has been hit very hard because of the recession. It has been rated the fifth neediest city in the country. The type of people needing assistance has changed. Not too long ago, the "SUV" crowd (the middle class) was doing really well. They were driving SUVs, paying their bills and had good educations. But, when the economy tanked, they were really lost because they didn't know how to work the system and are mortified. In Central Florida there are three to four hundred thousand people who are one paycheck, one divorce, or one sickness away from falling through the system. We need to bring dignity back to them and give them hope. What they need is short term assistance and a hand "up" not a hand "out". Partnering with those in need gives them an opportunity to help and gives them ownership. We're not enabling them; we're empowering them which makes them feel good. We're trying to break the cycle of poverty by changing the way they think. We need to give people hope and encourage them.

Host Nick Kroger and John Murphy, Founder and President of Harvest Time International, discuss the importance of career changes. In the last 2 years, there has been a 300% increase in the number of people who have had a financial setback. A lot of people have been trained in certain areas and now there is no need for that service. You can't wait for something to happen, you have to make something happen. When a person loses their job and makes a career change, it gives them hope. When you fall down, it's hard to get in motion again, but if you keep moving, it's easier. Be willing to do whatever it takes, volunteering, if necessary. A lot of people who are building careers around themselves are not happy doing what they're doing. A career change can be good, finding what makes you happy. Men have a harder time coping with a career change. They don't want anyone thinking that they can't make their own way. But, it's not a contest between men and women. There are several organizations that work together with businesses in Central Florida to train people for entry level positions so the businesses will hire them. Career changes can prepare you to do a better job. Whatever you're doing, do it well with the expectation of moving forward.

Host Nick Kroger and John Murphy, Founder and President of Harvest Time International, discuss the importance of self esteem during a financial setback. During the current economic times, Middle income people are now in the need for financial assistance in some way. But, no matter what a person's previous salary was, we need to show regard for the person. Meeting the financial need and dealing with self esteem has a ripple affect into the families and the community. When a parent is feeling down on themselves, an attitude forms which can make them snap quickly and take it out on those that are close to them. We need to make sure each person is treated as special. Every person alive has a purpose. You need to focus on what you can do, not what you can't do. People need to stop living on the "only ifs". Surveys going back 100 years showed that the pockets of low income areas never changed. Organizations usually try to help from the outside and it seems like it doesn't help. We need to go inside the communities and reach one family at a time, one street at a time. We need to adopt a block and be there when they need us and not wait until they are so low that they have lost all hope.

					Host Nick Kroger and Karen Almond, Seminole County School Board Member, discuss community involvement in the schools. Connecting the community and the schools to support each other is beneficial to both. A lot of people want to give their money when times are good, but when times are bad, their time becomes important. Some ways the community can help to make the school system successful is by mentoring students or helping in a classroom. Businesses can also share their resources. On a regular basis, the schools have Teach-ins to have professional personnel come in and share their careers with the students. This mirrors to the children and serves as an example and builds respect. The mission is to make sure that the students acquire the knowledge, skills and attitudes to become successful.

					Host Nick Kroger and Daryl Flynn, Vice Chair for the Orange County School Board, discuss the need for the increase in the property tax millage rate. We're facing one of the worse financial crises in this economic downturn. Schools are funded with state sales tax and county property tax. Most of the money used to come from state sales revenue, but now it's reversed. Budget revenues have declined more than 1 million dollars and the federal incentives go away next year. An additional millage tax will make up the shortfall. With the class size amendment, more funds are needed for additional teachers and resources. This makes the millage tax all the more important. Schools are doing their best to rearrange students and repurpose teachers, but only time will tell if these methods will be effective.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Regina Klaers, Director of Community Involvement for Seminole County Schools about school involvement. Central Florida schools have suffered a great deal of cutbacks, but what can lessen the pressures caused by the cutbacks is community involvement. It is a win/win situation. Our schools are part of the community and the community can help the schools. Seminole County Schools has about 1,000 business partners helping 61 schools by supplying things that are not included in the budget such as banquets and funds. Because of community involvement the school board hasn't had to cut back on athletics or the arts. Not only can businesses be involved, but individuals can be involved with the Dividends program and the PTA. Also, when parents are involved in the PTA, they become more involved in their child's lives and know what's going on at school.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Frank Podeswa, Director-College Programs, and Kathy King, Vice-President of Education for Junior Achievement, regarding the importance of getting Central Florida students business ready. Even though there are two post high school tracks, vocational or college, the current trend in Central Florida is for students to prepare for college. But, no matter what track a student takes, being business ready will be important. Young adults need to know the basics such as budgeting and information about credit, and also the foundations to be successful in any organization. Building a relationship with money can start as soon as a child understands the value of money. Later, the students should learn about regional resources and how they are transported and used throughout the country. In high school years, students should become workforce ready, learning about resumes and job interviews.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Beverly Brown, Executive Director of Redeeming Light Community Services, Inc., about the problem of school suspensions. Suspensions from school occur mostly in grades 6-8. However, the age of suspended students is getting lower and lower. Because of zero tolerance in Florida schools, infractions can no longer be handled in the principal's office with the students immediately returning to the classroom. An infraction can be as simple as a disruption in classroom or as serious as fighting. The longest suspensions are 10 days, but the age of the student and the infraction is taken into consideration when suspensions are given. A problem arises when a student stays home and treats a suspension like a school vacation. They get behind in their school work and sometimes hang out in the neighborhood with nothing to do. This can add to the juvenile crime issues. With programs designed especially for suspended students, they receive structured guidance, help with their school work, tutoring and mentoring. When the student returns to school, they are not behind in school work and less likely to be a repeat offender.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Beverly Brown, Executive Director of Redeeming Light Community Services, Inc., about educating female students. Statistics show that more girls than boys are graduating high school and entering college. This is attributed to the fact that girls learn differently than boys. Girls have a different focus, are motivated and grasp the need to progress more. The long term focus to a goal exists with girls. However, the attitude of some girls has changed. It's unfortunate when you see "tweens" say that they want to have a baby. There is a deliberate desire to have someone to love them that slows down the educational focus. There is a need to give them a true idea of raising children, not one that the media gives them. There are a lot of mentoring programs for boys, but we need to have mentoring programs for girls in place also. We should start focusing on our girls' education at birth. They don't need to go to college necessarily, but they need to do something productive. They need to plan for the future. The most important thing is for them to stay focused, stay determined, and not let things distract them.

Host Nick Kroger and Pete Clarke, founder of Primary Care Access Network discuss the problems that the working poor have in receiving healthcare. About 10 years ago, Orange County leaders wanted to make sure that everyone had healthcare. A local healthcare clinic closed and it left a lot of uninsured residents without healthcare. A group was formed, Primary Care Access Network, that was a collaborative effort of healthcare providers, doctors, hospitals and organizations to take care of this need. Currently, there are 14 clinics in Central Florida providing healthcare to the uninsured. But, in Orange County alone, 75-80% of the residents are uninsured. A large part of this demographic is made up of working individuals who can't afford insurance, but who don't qualify for government aid. With the Primary Care Access Network and others like it, these individuals and their families can get healthcare for themselves and their families.

Host Nick Kroger and Dr. John Gammichia, community leader, discuss the issue of foregoing dental care during recessions. During economic downturns, dentistry tends to be put on the back burner. However, this can lead to more costly problems later. For example, let's say it costs $100 to fill cavity, but it gets put aside for 1-2 years. That cavity can lead to more problems. The bacterium has now reached the nerves and a root canal, a filling and possibly a crown is needed. Now, it becomes a $2,000 problem. Cleanings are just as important. Gum disease is a silent killer and you can lose bone around your teeth. Putting the cleaning aside, the $80 cleaning becomes a $1,000 periodontal problem. In Central Florida, Dental Care Access has several organizations that can help provide services not covered by insurance or Medicaid. Dentistry from the Heart, which is made up of local dentists, also provides free care once a year.

Host Nick Kroger and Heidi Brewton, President of Autism Society of Greater Orlando, discuss the need to support family members affected by autism. When a child has autism, it's really hard for the family to do things together. And, the siblings without autism feel left out. It's important that people know that not all autistic children are the same. Some like to be hugged and others do not. Some may have sensory issues, while others enjoy loud music. The biggest misconception is that autistic children are not intelligent. Autism doesn't affect the intelligence; it affects the ability to express what you already know. When a family has an autistic child, they need to get together with other families with autistic children. This is really important in the early stages of diagnosis. The families can compare notes on doctors and treatments. The siblings can also see that they are not the only ones in this type of situation.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Maryalicia Johnson, Sr. Director of Media Relations & Public Awareness, and Wayne Humphrey, Vice-President of Government and Community Relations for the Central Florida YMCA, regarding reasons people are unhealthy. In today's world a family is not what it was 30 years ago. Everyone is going their own way, single parent homes or homes where both parents work do not cater to a family being together. Facilities where families can be active together are best. The goal should be 30 minutes a day for families to get out and be active, but just being active for 10 minutes is better than nothing. A good starting activity is walking. Walking is a natural human experience and it can be down at a person's own pace. Usually, when a person starts walking regularly, other activities are added to their routine. This not only is a health benefit, but it can help children academically because they're not so sluggish.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Merrill Frailey, Life Coach for Choose Joy Now, about hindering our health with our emotional state. There is a connection between a person's emotional being and their physical health. When our emotional state is not at its best, it affects our physical being. Depression, worry and fear affects a person's sleep habits and what they eat. Who you surround yourself with is also a factor. Are the people around you upbeat and do they encourage you? The environment plays a big part. In your home, do you open your blinds and let the sunshine in? A positive attitude is very important. Instead of saying, "I have to go to work", say "I get to go to work because I have a job". Instead of saying, "I have to go work out", say I get to go work out because I have my health". We need to stop our worries and fears and be grateful. At the end of the day, look at what was accomplished and count all of the unexpected joys that came. It comes down to having a positive attitude and choosing joy.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Debbie Turner, Founder of Cancer Care/Resources Inc., about the lack of being prepared while having cancer treatment. There are a lot of things to take into consideration when diagnosed with cancer. Your treatment involves more than just chemotherapy. Patients need to find, among other things, wigs, prosthetics, a data base for resources, transportation to doctors, food shopping. These are things that the average person doesn't think about. When a person is diagnosed, they are so wrapped up in the fact that they have cancer that they lose track of everyday living, such as paying bills. Cancer patients need a good support system, a caregiver, family member or friend to help them take care of daily tasks. For those who are single, a co-worker or neighbor is sometimes the best person. They can come over and check on you and see if you need groceries or prescriptions filled. Emotional needs are also very important. Just a phone call once in a while or a card goes a long way.

Lori Johnson, CBN News Reporter, says resolving to live healthier in the new year is a great decision! If that's your goal, you should know studies show that the more specific you can be, the more likely you will reach your goal. Here are the top ten healthy habits for the new year: 1. Exercise. Exercising has both short-term and long-term benefits. Right away, it can improve your mood, reduce stress, and even make your brain work better. Over time, exercise can prevent health problems ranging from obesity and diabetes to heart disease and even cancer. Even with all these benefits, some 60 percent of Americans stay on the couch. If you'd like to be in the 40 percent of regular exercisers, psychologists say to focus on the first three weeks. Be encouraged that it will get easier! Studies have shown that any activity repeated daily becomes a habit after three weeks. 2. Eat a healthy breakfast. Preferably with protein, within 90 minutes of waking-up. This starts your metabolism for the day and also prevents you from getting too hungry and overeating later in the day. 3. Eat five servings of fruits and vegetables a day. One serving equals a 1/2 cup of cooked vegetables or a full cup of raw or leafy vegetables or one small whole fruit. 4. Avoid trans fats. Trans fats are found mostly in processed foods, so if the list of ingredients includes the word, "hydrogenated," stay away. 5. Eat good fats. Omega-3s are found in foods like fish, especially salmon, sardines, and fish oil supplements. Other choices include walnuts, almonds, and flaxseed. These have been shown to reduce the risk of heart disease, improve your immunity, and reduce inflammation. 6. Avoid sugar. This is one of the toughest. Its negative laundry list runs from obesity to diabetes to heart disease and cancer. The average American consumes 135 pounds of sugar a year, compared with 109 pounds 20 years ago and only five pounds in the late 1800s! 7. Cleanse your hands often. Eating right and exercising aren't the only habits that keep you healthy. Did you know the best way to avoid getting sick is to keep your hands clean? When using hand sanitizer, make sure it's at least 60 percent alcohol, get in all those nooks and crannies, and rub your hands until they're dry. When using soap and water, lather-up for a full 20 seconds. 8. Practice good dental health. Believe it or not, periodontal infection contributes to heart disease, diabetes, and even premature, underweight births. 9. Get regular screening. The type of screenings you need depend on your age and gender, so consult with your doctor about which ones you need. Some of the most important ones include an annual physical, blood pressure, and cholesterol test, colonoscopy, mammogram, pap test, and prostate and skin cancer screening. 10. Get enough sleep. So at this time of year, when many of us vow to start afresh, take note of these habits to make 2011 your healthiest year yet.

Lori Johnson, CBN News Reporter, asks are you often sad during the winter? People have talked about those blues since before the Civil War. But in the last 30 years, doctors have officially recognized the winter blues as a named, medical condition called Seasonal Affective Disorder, or SAD. The good news is that you can beat it! Decreased sunlight during the winter is the main reason why people develop SAD, because less daylight can disrupt our circadian rhythm, also known as our body clock. Melatonin, a hormone which makes us feel tired, is triggered by darkness and reaches its highest levels at night. People also have increased melatonin levels during the day. On the opposite side, the neurotransmitter serotonin, which is triggered by sunlight, makes us feel happy. But people with SAD have low levels of serotonin. Women are more often affected than men and the disorder is more prevalent in northern climates. Light therapy is a very effective treatment and involves sitting in front of a specialized light box for 30 minutes a day. The box needs to have a power of 10,000 lux, which is more than 20 times stronger than the average light bulb. Beware though: Tanning beds are not an acceptable treatment because they emit ultraviolet rays. So say "no" to the tanning bed, but "yes" to the light box. And in addition to the light box, other ways to brighten up your life include: Using higher wattage light bulbs, installing a sky light, sitting closer to the window, trimming branches that block sunlight and simply opening the blinds. If you have SAD and work in a dark environment make it a point to spend a few minutes outside every hour or so. Although it's tempting for people with SAD to reach for their comforter, they should reach for their gym bag instead. Exercise is another great tool for fighting the effects of SAD. A cardiovascular workout pumps oxygen into the brain, making us alert and energetic. Exercise also releases endorphins, neurotransmitters that create a feeling of euphoria. So if you suffer from Seasonal Affective Disorder, or SAD, a few lifestyle changes can help you enjoy winter. And spring will be here before you know it!

Lori Johnson, CBN News Reporter, says during the past 50 years Americans have developed a drinking problem with convenience. We buy our drinks already-made, everything from water to coffee. But it's the ingredients found in some of those beverages that have some physicians sounding a warning. Take for instance energy drinks. With names like Rock Star, Monster, and Full Throttle, energy drinks pack a punch that young people can't get enough of. In fact, one in three teenagers regularly drinks them. Energy drinks burst on the scene 20 years ago. They are now so popular, Americans are expected to spend $9 billion on them this year, making them the fastest-growing beverage market. What's in these energy drinks that has them flying off the shelves? Mainly caffeine, at least the amount found in a strong cup of coffee, sometimes much more. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration only requires that manufacturers list the presence of caffeine in a product, not how much. Energy drinks can also be loaded with sugar -- a quarter-cup on average. Also, since they're marketed as dietary supplements, they often contain unregulated herbal stimulants like Taurine, Guarana, Creatine and B vitamins. Doctors say this can be a dangerous mix. In fact, the medical journal Pediatrics warns energy drinks can cause kids to suffer heart palpitations, seizures, strokes, and even sudden death. The pediatrician also tells his patients not to even drink one because they can be highly addictive. Energy drinks are often marketed to athletes for that extra boost. But they can pose even more problems for athletes than non-athletes, including increased blood pressure and serious dehydration. Because of that risk, many athletes who shy away from the energy drinks choose the sports drinks instead. But doctors warn that while sports drinks don't have the caffeine that energy drinks contain, they do have their own set of problems. For instance, sports drinks can corrode teeth even more than soda. The acid in sports drinks erodes the teeth from the first sip until 45 minutes after the last sip, when the saliva returns the mouth to its normal pH balance. So how many carbohydrates are in what you're drinking? It's on the bottle. But watch out -- that number is carbohydrates per serving. Many bottles contain two or more servings. So if you drink the whole bottle, you're consuming at least twice the number of carbohydrates on the label. So while Americans have more beverage choices than ever, doctors say don't be fooled. Just because a drink has a healthy image, that doesn't mean it's good for you.

Dr. Don Colbert talked about heart disease. It is the number one killer in the United States. Often the first symptom is sudden death. The root is inflammation caused by fatty meats, excessive sugars and fried foods. It's important to have your C Reactive Protein measured, to eat anti-inflammatory foods, lose belly fat and have dark chocolate. Dr. James Mittelberger talked about Palliative Care. It specializes in protecting people from their symptoms caused by medical treatments or serious illnesses. It allows for pain to be managed which will allow for the comfort and quality of life to improve. Patients should discuss Palliative Care with their doctor as a way to help with symptom control. Dr. Martin Finkelstein talked about mind and body connection. When muscles near the cervical spine experience trauma or stress, they can tighten up and irritate nerves. This can lead to headaches, allergies and sinus problems. It's important to take care of our body, pay attention to symptoms and to correct the problem.

Dr. Dan Collins talked about emotional trauma. There are five stages: Can't cope with emotions, can't tell time, can't move, can't learn and can't see. It's important that at each stage that a person learns to face the problem, learn to deal with it and move toward mastering it. Dr. Clark Gerhart talked about reflexes. They are nerve responses that allow for quick decisions and help us deal with the stress of everyday life. Reflexes can lead to repetitive behavior that can harm us. It is important to pay attention to them and correct them where necessary. Dr. Thomas Distefano talked about how to become a doctor. After college, there is medical school. It takes about 4 years to complete before heading into residency. Residency is usually completed in the field of interest; there can be additional years of specialized study. It can take quite a few years to become a doctor.

It's important to eat fresh food, spices, fish and whole grains. Dr. Ace Anglin talked about stress fractures. They can be caused by repetitive types of exercise or activities resulting in intense pain in a specific area. X-rays, immobilization, brace, cast and ice are all ways to help heal from stress fractures. Dr. Susan Cole talked about cancer screening. It is important to discover cancer early in order for the best outcome, especially if you are at high risk for lung, prostate, or colon cancer. Recommendations are always changing, but screening has become cheaper and less evasive.

Host Nick Kroger and Becky Anderson, Regional Director of C-Core, discuss the importance of mentoring youth. With the demographics of families these days, parents don't know how to help their young people find the career that they love. We know that people who work at a job that they love helps them to be more productive no matter what the job is. 50-60% of our youth will not finish high school. This isn't because of lack of abilities, but because they have too many obstacles. But, 52% of students with a mentor will not skip school, 46% will not turn to drugs, and 27% will not turn to drinking. It's difficult for young people to navigate from child to student to the work force. Matching a young person with an adult in a trade that they are interested in helps with the transition. Pairing youth with a mentor in a trade not only teachings them a skill, but instills positive character traits. When the young people work with someone in an industry that they are interested in, they see why they need to stay in school and have a good attitude.

Host Nick Kroger and Walt Glover from The Gathering discuss ways to keep young men from a life of crime. In the black community, we're losing a lot of black young men to prison and drugs. We all have a responsibility to try to turn this around. We need to get the youth to do some positive things. With mentoring, it could make a big difference in a lot of lives. The root of the problem is the fact that we have so many young men growing up without a father in the home. A good step in the right direction is to match the young men up with adult men and work together on community projects. These gives the adults a chance to teach the youth some skills and give them the opportunity to open up tell them what's missing in their lives. Mentoring and providing encouragement is a two way street. One by one, you build a community of people who see a future. While contributing to the community, a lot of the young men pick up needed skills and can hang around with right people, which has a positive affect on them.

Host Nick Kroger talks with Frank Thompson, Founder, and Chenice Thompson, Executive Director of Youth Central, about the issue of getting suspended students back in school and keeping them there. In Orange County, there are 30-35,000 suspensions each year. The suspensions can eventually lead to expulsions. Students who are at risk may be from a background of poverty, uneducated families, single parent homes, or involved or exposed to negative behavior such as drugs or alcohol. These are factors that can contribute to a student's ability to be successful in school. If a student is already struggling in school they may not be able to catch up after returning to school. They can become discouraged and repeat the negative behavior that caused the suspension. The pattern needs to be broken so the problem doesn't lead to the juvenile justice system. The first step to making a difference in a student's life is for parents to spend more quality time with their children. Just 10-15 minutes a day makes a difference. The kids need someone to sit with them one-on-one. Then, they realize that someone cares about them.

Host Nick Kroger and Melissa DeMarco, Mayor of Mount Dora, discuss the benefits of regulating the size of a small town. Mount Dora is a relaxing place and is where you want to go to get away. It attracts local people but also tourists and visitors. Mount Dora offers the real old Florida. When you come, you remember an old movie. But, Mount Dora has lots to offer if you want to be busy. There are tours, unique shops and Bread and Breakfast Inns. Mount Dora also offers several large festivals as well as small community events throughout the year. There is also a lot of parks and recreation opportunities for families. It has more park land per capita than any other city in Central Florida. Demographically, there is a mixture of groups. Mount Dora is a place that people go to when they retire, but there are families as well. Mount Dora has a mixture of excellent schools, some public, and some private. And, the Arts are important, with several theaters. But, the goal of Mount Dora is to stay small with a hometown feel.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Andrew Meadows, Director of Communications for the FL Citrus Mutual. During the first segment, they discuss how much the shrinking citrus market affects the Central Florida economy. The citrus industry is a 9 billion dollar market in Central Florida including 76,000 jobs in 32 counties. It is a huge part of Florida's economy, second only to tourism, but it is in danger of being eradicated. The citrus market has shrunk by 550,000 acres stated wide, but Central Florida still has a significant influence. The citrus growers tend to pass on their businesses to families, with several generations at a time remaining in the business. Growers face challenges every year with freezes, hurricanes, urban development and diseases, but always manage to endure. Two things that help the growers to continue in the business are research and diversifying with new hybrids. One of the biggest challenges right now is a new disease, HLB, which can kill trees within 2 years and is found in all citrus growing states. But, research is going on right now and there have been several breakthroughs on fighting the disease.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Sandi Vidal, Executive Director of Christian Help. During the first segment, they talk about the issue of getting help to those affected by the economy. Christian Help has seen over 12,000 people this year needing help because of the economy. Seniors are struggling the most. They have been in jobs for years and now they are being laid off or forced into early retirement. They don't know how to look for a job and businesses are hiring younger employees. The largest group needing help is the middle class who have lost their jobs. They are caught off guard and have never had to ask for help before, so it's difficult for them to receive help. What is needed is help with food, housing, prescriptions and utilities, but also one-on-one counseling, attending job fairs, and creating a job plan. People need to make a plan as soon as they lose their job. Living in denial can cause problems. There are 17 different agencies in Central Florida which are collaborating to offer support to those in need. By calling 211, residents can get direction to the resources needed.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Chester Wood, Director of Samaritan Inn. During the first segment, they discuss the overlooked necessities of those with financial challenges. A recession not only affects adults, but also children. When parents don't have jobs, the children sometimes are missing the basics like a secure home. There is an alarming amount of children that are homeless; Lake County has identified 2,000 children that are without homes. A lot of the parents of these children do not have high school diplomas or GEDs, so their opportunity to get employment is limited. In smaller counties with small budgets, the individuals in lower socioeconomic groups are not assisted as much as they need to be. Mr. Wood feels that more education can go a long way to keep the parents on a productive path in order to contribute back to society. This not only helps the family, but also helps improve the economy.

In Lake County the majority of the citizens were working in the field of construction, so when the recession, hit, construction stopped and a lot of people were out of a job. When a person loses their job, sometimes they lose their home and have to live in their car. But then sometimes they lose their car, too. The problem is that the person needs their job to have a home and car, but they need the home and car to have a job. Steve Smith noted that the current economy is creating a cycle of economic dependency. Mr. Smith feels that citizens, non-profit organizations, civic departments and local schools need to work together to provide the basics to those in need. Even small things like transporting people, giving make-overs or donating food items that we receive in buy one, get one free offers can help.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Thresa Holden, Breast Cancer Coordinator for Florida Hospital. During the first segment, they discuss the importance of breast exams. The American Cancer Society recommends that women begin getting mammograms at the age of 40. If there is a history of breast cancer in the family, then women should begin earlier. Beginning at age 40, they should have a mammogram every year. Later in age and with their doctor's approval, these can be reduced. However, older women are at risk, so Central Florida will see more cases. Inflammatory cancer can change the color of the skin, so women need to pay attention to their bodies with self exams. Early detection is important because the prognosis is 99% in stage 0 and stage 1. Women with no family history still need to have mammograms because only about 10% of women diagnosed with breast cancer have family history.

During the second segment, they discuss the different types of diabetes and the need to be aware of them. In Central Florida there are 2.4 million people with diabetes. This is roughly 9.7% of the adult population. About ¼ of the people don't even know they have diabetes. The national average is 10.7%. Type 1 diabetes only affects 5-10% of the population and it affects mostly children and young adults. Type 2 diabetes is the most common; it affects 90-95% of people who have diabetes. The body doesn't make enough insulin or doesn't do it correctly. It's thought of as an adult disorder. But, it's become more apparent that young people are developing it because of obesity. Another type of diabetes is gestation diabetes that affects pregnant women. It usually goes away after the baby is born. But, these women can develop diabetes later.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Mary Alicia Johnson, Sr. Director of Media Relations & Public Awareness, and Wayne Humphrey, Vice-President of Government and Community Relations for the Central Florida YMCA. During the second segment they discuss reasons people are so unhealthy. In today's world a family is not what it was 30 years ago. Everyone is going their own way, single parent homes or homes where both parents work do not cater to a family being together. Facilities where families can be active together are best. The goal should be 30 minutes a day for families to get out and be active, but just being active for 10 minutes is better than nothing. A good starting activity is walking. Walking is a natural human experience and it can be done at a person's own pace. Usually, when a person starts walking regularly, other activities are added to their routine. This not only is a health benefit, but it can help children academically because they're not so sluggish.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Merrill Fralley, Life Coach for Choose Joy Now. During the second segment, they talk about hindering our health with our emotional state. There is a connection between a person's emotional being and their physical health. When our emotional state is not at its best, it affects our physical being. Depression, worry and fear affects a person's sleep habits and what they eat. Who you surround yourself with is also a factor. Are the people around you upbeat and do they encourage you? The environment plays a big part. In your home, do you open your blinds and let the sunshine in? A positive attitude is very important. Instead of saying, "I have to go to work", say "I get to go to work because I have a job". Instead of saying, "I have to go work out", say "I get to go work out because I have my health". We need to stop our worries and fears and be grateful. At the end of the day, look at what was accomplished and count all of the unexpected joys that came. It comes down to having a positive attitude and choosing joy.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Alison Issen, Community Education Coordinator for Hospice of the Comforter. During the first segment, they discuss providing care to terminally ill patients and their families. Hospice care provides specific care for a specific time of life, usually the last 6 months. Hospice care is comfort care and comes when curative treatment is not helping and may be causing more suffering. It requires a team which includes the patient's primary doctor, hospice director, registered nurse, social worker, and chaplain. Certified nursing assistants take care of daily dignity needs and the chaplain provides bereavement counseling. The family is provided with counseling for 13 months after the patient dies. Hospice care is provided in the patient's home or nursing facility and the patient, along with their family, is in charge of the care. Anyone can request hospice care, but a doctor is needed to confirm that the patient only has 6 months to live. This type of care is covered by Medicare, Medicaid and insurance, but if there is no Medicare, Medicaid or insurance, there is other ways to pay for it. No one gets a bill.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes back Alison Issen, Community Education Coordinator for Hospice of the Comforter. During the second segment, they discuss ways to recognize dementia in a love one and how to provide assistance. Dementia includes a wide group of disorders where cognition is affected, with Alzheimer's disease being the most common. In Florida, there are approximately one half million people with Alzheimer's disease and one reason is due to our longevity. Alzheimer's disease can have duration of 2-20 years, but the average is 8-10 years. It is divided into three stages. In the early stage, people aren't sure what's happening to them, but there is a pattern. There are memory issues with things that there shouldn't be with. Alison noted that we may forget where we put our keys, but we don't usually forget what the keys are for. Because of the length of the disease, it is the hardest care-giving situation. Someone caring for a family member should immediately get some support. Have a family meeting and share the burden; it shouldn't be the responsibility of one family member.

Lori Johnson, CBN News Reporter, says if you're trying to eat healthy, perhaps you have heard to stay away from processed foods. While that's great advice, it seems many people are confused about what exactly constitutes processed food. If you can't identify them, it's hard to cut processed foods out of your diet. And although most people know processed foods are bad for them, it's often unclear what makes them so dangerous to a person's health. Remember - processed foods are foods that have been altered from their natural state. Have you ever wondered why a pre-packaged food stays fresh for months, when the same food made from scratch grows moldy in just days? It's because food manufacturers use man-made ingredients that prolong a product's shelf life. Unfortunately, they may have the opposite effect on peoples' health. Trans fats are commonly found in commercially fried food and packaged foods, especially baked goods. But you won't see the phrase, "trans fat" in the list of ingredients. Instead, look for the word, "hydrogenated." And beware of labels claiming no trans fats. They're often still in there, because the Food and Drug Administration allows food with up to a half-gram of trans fat per serving to be labeled "trans fat free." The problem is, those servings can be small so we eat many servings, and those half-grams add-up. Vending machines are often loaded with processed foods. In addition to trans fats, they often contain too much salt, which can cause heart problems and creates a craving for even more salt. Another addictive ingredient you'll find in processed foods is high fructose corn syrup, which is linked to obesity and diabetes. Although high fructose corn syrup manufacturers contend it's nutritionally the same as sugar, others say it's worse. Also on the list are other syrups and sweeteners like dextrose, glucose, lactose and maltose. And speaking of chemical names, here's another one to watch out for: monosodium glutamate, or MSG for short. Food manufacturers like it because it adds flavor. But doctors dislike it because it causes high insulin secretion. Believe it or not, even white flour is a processed food. Its soft texture and mild taste is created by removing the most nutritious parts of the wheat berry, the bran and the germ. The starch leftover is digested too fast in the body and can lead to weight gain, diabetes, heart disease and cancer. By contrast, whole wheat flour includes the entire wheat berry, which is digested slowly, making us feel full longer. Although identifying processed foods and removing them from our diet isn't easy, it may be less troubling than dealing with the health problems they could create

Dr. Eric Braverman talked about brain health. Dopamine in the brain helps the body to keep going. Acetylcholine helps with attention and focus. Progesterone helps build GABA which provides stability. It's important to keep a balance in the brain by taking Fish oil and natural hormones. Jessica Setnick talked about healthier eating out. Restaurant portions are big as well as the plates. This can lead to over eating and feeling guilty. It's important to not be overly hungry when you go or feel like you have to finish all of your food. You can share your meal or eat only half and take the rest home with you. Dr. Daniel Leeman talked about Sinusitis and Rhinitis. Rhinitis is inflammation of the nasal cavity. Sinusitis is inflammation of the sinus cavity. Symptoms can be facial pain/pressure, lack of smell, teeth hurt and difficult breathing. An exam of the nose and culture may be performed at a doctor's office. Decongestants and nasal sprays can help relieve symptoms.

Dr. Scott Hannen talked about allergies and the liver. The liver filters our toxins in the blood and pushes them out. If the liver is unable to do this, it begins to produce histamine to flush everything out. This is when an allergic reaction can occur resulting in watery eyes, runny nose and sneezing. It's important the liver and digestive system is functioning properly. Dr. John Fisher talked about vertebral compression fractures. It is fractures in the spin often happening to the elderly population or post menopausal women. The main symptom is pain that is very debilitating. Treatment can be a back brace and bed rest to a vertebral augmentation procedure. Dr. Ross Dorsett talked about dementia. It occurs in 1/3 of adults over the age of 80. It's a loss of higher thinking or cognitive skills. A form of dementia is Alzheimer's disease. This is when the brain cells die off. It's important to get a thorough evaluation. Some drugs are available to slow down the progression.

The body doesn't know what to do with it so it causes problems for the gut, GI and brain. It can also cause seizures, migraines and chronic headaches. There are different tests available to determine if a person has a gluten allergy. Dr. George Alonso talked about Influenza. It is a viral disease often occurring during the autumn and winter season. Individuals at a higher risk are seniors over 65 years of age, pregnant females and those with medical conditions. The flu vaccination as well as hand washing and proper coughing and sneezing etiquette are important to prevent it. Dr. Abinash Achrekar talked about quitting smoking. It is very difficult to quit because nicotine is highly addictive. Only 3-5% of individuals are successful if they quit cold turkey. Host Nick Kroger welcomes back Chester Wood, Director of Samaritan Inn, and during the second segment, they discuss the need for more transitional housing. Transitional housing is so important for stabilizing homeless families because parents' first priority is to provide food and shelter for their children. Mr. Wood points out that if food and shelter can be provided, then the parents can concentrate on education or training issues to get a job. They need a safe place to stay so that they can concentrate on moving forward with independence and self sufficiency as the goals. A unique way to provide transitional housing that is overlooked is to remodel unused hotels. Because of the economy, Central Florida has several unused and unsightly hotels. Remodeling them not only provides transitional housing for families, it creates jobs. When people are working, they are contributing to society and helping the economy. And, by changing old hotels into transitional housing for families, it helps to keep the families together.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Meredith Griffin, Homeless Coordinator for Osceola Public Schools, and Mary Lee Downey, Program Manager of HOPE. During the first segment, Nick talks with Meredith Griffin about the growing number of homeless children in Central Florida. Six years ago, there were 126 homeless children in Osceola County. Today, there are 1,300 recorded homeless children in the county and 75,000 in the state of Florida. However, identifying the children has challenges, so the number could be as high as 2,700 children in Osceola County alone. Each Florida school district has a homeless coordinator whose job is to identify the homeless students and find ways to help them. Identifying them is a challenge because many of them live with family members or their parents hide their situation for fear of having the children placed in foster care. It's easier to identify the younger children because they use "adult" words like foreclosure and eviction or they brag about how they have maid service in the hotel. Not only does each school district have a homeless coordinator, they also have a volunteer program to help with these situations.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes back Meredith Griffin, Homeless Coordinator for Osceola Public Schools, and Mary Lee Downey, Program Manager of HOPE. During the second segment, Nick talks with Mary Lee Downey about the challenges of families living in transitional housing. Homelessness is not just specific to one demographic. It can even include people with college degrees. We are all just one paycheck away from being homeless. One problem that homeless families face is a lack of support. Not only are the parents homeless, but the grandparents are also homeless. Another challenge in Central Florida is the fact that homeless shelters split the families up. Women and children stay in one shelter and the men need to stay in another shelter. And, if you separate the families, they lose their support. Ms. Griffin feels that support and life training is crucial to alleviating homelessness. Families were doing very well financially, the parents had degrees, the children were in private schools and suddenly life got in the way. Life training can help the families adjust to a new lifestyle.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes back Steve Smith, Found of New Beginnings. During the second segment they discuss how children are affected by their family's homeless situation. The School District of Lake County reports 2,100 students as being homeless. But, this does not include preschoolers or students too embarrassed to identify themselves as homeless. There are different levels of homelessness and each one has its own sets of problems. A family that is homeless could be living with family or friends, living in a hotel, in a storage unit, in their car, or even in the woods. In many instances, the children are unable to do homework, keep up with their peers, or even perform basic hygiene tasks like brushing their teeth. It is especially difficult for high school students, who are not only embarrassed that they don't have the same things as their friends, but need help with school projects or completing college applications. Often, the older children drop out of school to help support the family. Without an adequate education, they become a burden on society later. To remedy the solution, Steve Smith feels that volunteers are needed to help teach people to become self-sufficient.

Central Florida has traffic issues and Mayor Maingot feels that a commuter rail, the SunRail Project, would be a tremendous asset and Central Florida really should move forward with it. The Governor, however, is being cautious. The new buzz word is transient development which encourages walkability and pedestrians, with the Longwood station at the forefront. Longwood is a small city, just 6.5 miles, with limited areas for development. The SunRail project would link Longwood's hospital and surrounding area, improve walkability, bike trails and parks. With a $14 million investment, Mayor Maingot feels that the SunRail Project would create jobs and generate $319 million in income.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes John Lewis, CEO of Lynx Central FL Transportation Authority. During the first segment, they discuss how to get people to ride the bus more. In Central Florida, 90,000 people use the bus per day, Monday through Friday. Because Central Florida has a rich tourism industry, there are a steady number of riders throughout the day and even more riders during the weekend. But, Central Florida has heavy traffic congestion, because more people could be riding the bus. People in Central Florida love their cars, but public transportation should be another option that people think of. Mr. Lewis is working hard to make sure the buses are clean, the routes are efficient and more people know about the bus service. An important aide is the fact that the Lynx bus service covers four regions, Orange County, Osceola County, Seminole County and the city of Orlando. And, these counties have a great partnership and work together well to serve Central Florida, which is an unusual situation in other parts of the country. Government officials contribute to the operating costs of the bus service and make suggestions for improvement.

The Lynx Central FL Transportation Authority provides several different types of service including door to door service for the handicapped. The service provided exclusively to downtown Orlando is call the LYMMO transit system, a bus rapid transit system that has been in service for 10 years. The bus rapid transit system moves people quickly that moves people through downtown quickly. This system is addition to the regular bus service. Mr. Lewis noted that public transportation is just one option and LYMMO is competing with people's time. There are also plans to expand routes to connect the hospitals so that people can get to any destination in downtown.

During the second segment, host Nick Kroger welcomes back Mayor Howard Schieferdecker to discuss how important the SunRail project is to the city of Maitland. The city of Maitland heavily impacts the traffic in Central Florida. This is due to the fact that the city is located between major roads, 17/92 and I-4. Maitland also has one of the largest office parks in the Southeast, Maitland Center. The state can't just keep building roads and widening lanes. Mayor Schieferdecker feels that as the area grows, public transportation will become necessary. Because of Maitland Center and the approximation to the city of Winter Park, a major art district, a SunRail stop in Maitland, would help with traffic congestion. Mayor Schieferdecker also points out that each SunRail station will have major economic development with shops and restaurants. This will create jobs and increase tax bases for the cities. Now is a difficult time to raise taxes, so increasing the tax bases for the cities would make up for the loss of revenue from the decline in property values.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Catherine Hickem, author of Regret Free Parenting, and they discuss raising children in a technical age. Today, we live in a high technical world with even the schools incorporating technology into their curriculum. Ms. Hickem feels that technology has its place and has added to our lives, but it has taken over our families. As parents we're working around the technology instead of saying it has boundaries. To use it as a babysitter occasionally is fine, but it shouldn't become a habit. Young children do not have the maturity to handle the responsibilities of a cell phone or social network page. It's fine for parents to set limits on use of technology. It's not the parent's job to make their kids happy; it's their job to parent the children well. One important rule is not to let a child have their own computer in their room. There should be one shared computer in a central location, so the parent can monitor what the children are doing. The parents should let the children show them their internet history and provide the parents with their passwords to social network pages. Ms. Hickem also feels that the computer is the most important technical tool, but it is also the most dangerous.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes back Catherine Hickem, author of Regret Free Parenting. During the second segment, they discuss parenting teenagers. To make parenting teenagers easier, Ms. Hickem believes that parents need to have a positive attitude and understand what happens during adolescence. Parents get frustrated because their teenagers are unorganized and irresponsible, but this is normal. Their bodies are going through emotional changes and they are vulnerable and afraid that no one likes them. Parents need to be their best when their teenagers are the worst. Problems are caused when parents value their teenagers on achievement or performance and neglect their heart, character and faith. Ms. Hickem also believes that if parents take care of the "who" of a child's heart, the "do" will take care of itself. Children's actions are the result of what's going on inside of them. Parents also need to respect their teens. If parents don't allow their teens to treat talk to them in a disrespectful manner, then the parents shouldn't talk to the teens in a disrespectful manner.

Host Nick Kroger introduces and welcomes Kathy Gautsch, Founder of Wings of Hope. During the first segment, they discuss how abused children still need a connection to their families. With the economy down, parents are more stressed and take it out on their children. These children haven't done anything wrong, but they are removed from their home because of abuse or neglect. Sometimes they even run away. The number of abused children is rising, but the funding is less because of budget cuts. When removing children from their home, safety is the number one priority. The children not only have physical needs, but also face emotional challenges. The people they depended on the most are the ones harming them. The children blame themselves and develop anger issues and low self-esteem. They can find themselves in as many as 10 different foster homes before they are 18, changing schools each time. After removing a child, the first option is to find a relative that will take them in. But, wherever the children end up, they still have an emotional attachment to their parents. Counseling is critical during the transitions. Mentoring has also helped a great deal.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes back Kathy Gautsch, Founder of Wings of Hope. In the second segment, they discuss how difficult it is for young adults to leave foster care. Currently, the age when a child leaves the foster care system is 18, but there is legislation in the process to increase that to 21. If an 18 year old wanted to stay with their foster family, they can't unless the family lets them. However, the family will not receive compensation. Because of aging out, 33% of 18 year olds will be homeless in the first 3 years. One small thing could happen, and then they find themselves without a home. Kathy feels that at this age, it's critical for them to continue their education, but they have to find a home and a car. Many of them are still in high school because of being behind. Group homes with a common living space can provide a necessary resource. The teenagers can help each other with transportation and have a sense of family. Many group homes also have classes in budgeting, how to rent an apartment and other life situations.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes and introduces Mayor John Maingot from the city of Longwood. During the first segment, they discuss the pros and cons of a city having a historical district. The city of Longwood has lots of history to preserve including the Longwood Hotel, the Inside-Outside House, the McGaughey house and the Christ Episcopal Church established in 1878. In 2009, Longwood updated their code book and with that, the formation and character of the historic district was established. Cost is one of the challenges to maintaining a historic district. The city of Longwood has a special fund to partner with the owners of the buildings to help maintain the buildings at the level and quality. To go about establishing a historic district, Mayor Maingot suggests that cities check federal guidelines and codes. The cities need to make sure all of they follow all of the codes exactly. If any cities would like to establish historic districts, Mayor Maingot and the city of Longwood are more than happy to work with them. A historic district gives a city character and image and gives them an opportunity for special events and festivals.

Host Nick Kroger welcomes and introduces Mayor Howard Schieferdecker from the city of Maitland. During the first segment, they discuss how small communities can operate on smaller budgets. Maitland is a small community with a home town feel to it and it operates without a downtown. For a lot of events, Maitland teams up with Winter Park, which is another small community that sits next to Maitland. Large communities have a strong form of government where the Mayor makes the decisions. The most prevalent form of government in Central Florida is one in which the City Manager runs the city and the Mayor doesn't make decisions. Maitland has a weak form of government in which the City Council members take turns make decisions. Maitland's City Council is made up of citizens who volunteer their time. The Mayor is elected, but the Vice-Mayor, who replaces the Mayor, is an appointed position. In order for a Vice-Mayor to be appointed, they must receive two votes from the city council.
